Thanks, Latrice. We have gotten several inquiries about this. Our Site websites and online is being revised and updated to a new format under Headquarters guidance and implementation. We assume that most site information will be redirected to this new format. Gary has also discussed this for the San Jacinto site and the importance of getting documents back, accessible.

Donn,

In the last couple of weeks I have checked the EPA's Superfund website for information I expected to find in a document that was previously seen online. However, I saw that the site has been totally revised so that you can now search all sites by name on a search bar. When I put in the location of interest and selected all documents it only gave me six documents. Where would I now look to find other documents related to the site?

Thank you,
